

GENDER PAY GAP REPORT – 2023

Introduction

Since April 2017, all large UK companies employing 250 people, or more are required to report on their gender pay gap. The government defines a gender pay gap as “the difference between the average earnings of men and women, expressed relative to men’s earnings”

Gender pay gap should not be confused with equal pay, which looks at the pay of women versus men for doing work of equal value. Gender pay gap reporting looks at the average pay of women versus men across all roles within an organisation.

Our Workforce

YESSS has been trading since 2012. We currently have a branch network across 100+ different locations throughout the UK and we employ over 800 employees.

The Electrical Wholesale industry is traditionally a male dominated industry, particularly at branches, which is mirrored at YESSS. The picture however is different in our shared services environments - here the balance is around 50:50 attracting both men and women.

The Data

Our gender pay gap is driven by having more men than women in both our senior leadership team and our branch network, with these colleagues attracting a higher level of bonus.

We continue to understand the importance of equality throughout our business and recognise that we need to continue making improvements in this area. Our plan for the future is to continue to attract, retain and develop talented individuals across our entire business.

I can confirm that the data published is accurate.
